

Taylor Consulting and Contracting Joins Albiro Energy
Transactions Strengthen Albiro's Energy Marketplace

Edison, New Jersey – November 27, 2018— Energy consulting and brokerage firm Taylor Consulting and Contracting (“Taylor”) today announced it is partnering with Albiro Energy, LLC (“Albiro Energy”) to help provide innovative solutions to the energy marketplace. This partnership will help Albiro Energy expand its efforts into the deregulated energy space and help build upon a robust energy management and procurement platform. Taylor will continue its day-to-day operations and will continue to communicate and provide services to its customer base.

For over a decade, Taylor has helped thousands of businesses gain greater control over their utility bills, energy prices, and contracts through its dedicated and talented team of market experts. Taylor has grown into an industry leader by providing powerful energy management and procurement platforms, and winning endorsements from the City of Philadelphia, the City of Boston, Independence Blue Cross, Dunkin’ Donuts, and several others.

"Our acquisition of Taylor compliments our overall value-added offerings of sustainable energy savings and infrastructure protection. Albiro Energy will be able to provide our clients proactive solutions to both use less energy and lower the cost of energy," said Phil Rogers, CEO of Albiro Energy.

"We are thrilled to join Albiro Energy and Huron Capital," said Scott Stiner, COO of Taylor Consulting, "and we very much look forward to our new collective future. Taylor has been a significant energy brokerage and data collection firm for years and this merger with Albiro Energy will allow our collective customers to connect the smart building with strategic procurement, budgeting and compliance services."
